Virtual Workshop on Mediation

On 8th February 2024, the Centre of Excellence in Alternative Dispute Resolution Law (CEADRL) at ICFAI Law School, Dehradun, hosted a highly informative Virtual Workshop on Mediation. This event was specially organized as a training session for participants of the upcoming 1st ICFAI Virtual National Mediation Competition. The workshop was delivered by Dr. Ashu Dhiman, a renowned expert in the field of mediation. Dr. Dhiman provided a comprehensive introduction to the concept of mediation, explaining its fundamental principles and the overall process involved. Her presentation covered the latest trends in the mediation industry and highlighted the critical skills necessary for professionals to succeed in both current and future mediation practices. The session was designed to be highly interactive. Participants were encouraged to engage actively by asking questions and discussing their doubts, leading to a fruitful and dynamic exchange of ideas. This interactive format ensured that attendees could gain a deeper understanding of mediation and clarify any uncertainties they had about the process.

Dr. Dhiman emphasized the importance of mediation skills, not only for the competition but also for legal professionals in general. The workshop underscored how these skills are essential for effective dispute resolution, fostering a collaborative rather than adversarial approach to conflicts. The workshop was a resounding success. Participants left with valuable insights into the essential skills required for the mediation competition and a broader understanding of mediation as a critical field in alternative dispute resolution. The session provided them with practical knowledge and strategies, preparing them to excel in the competition and enhancing their overall professional competence in mediation.

A Milestone in Legal Education

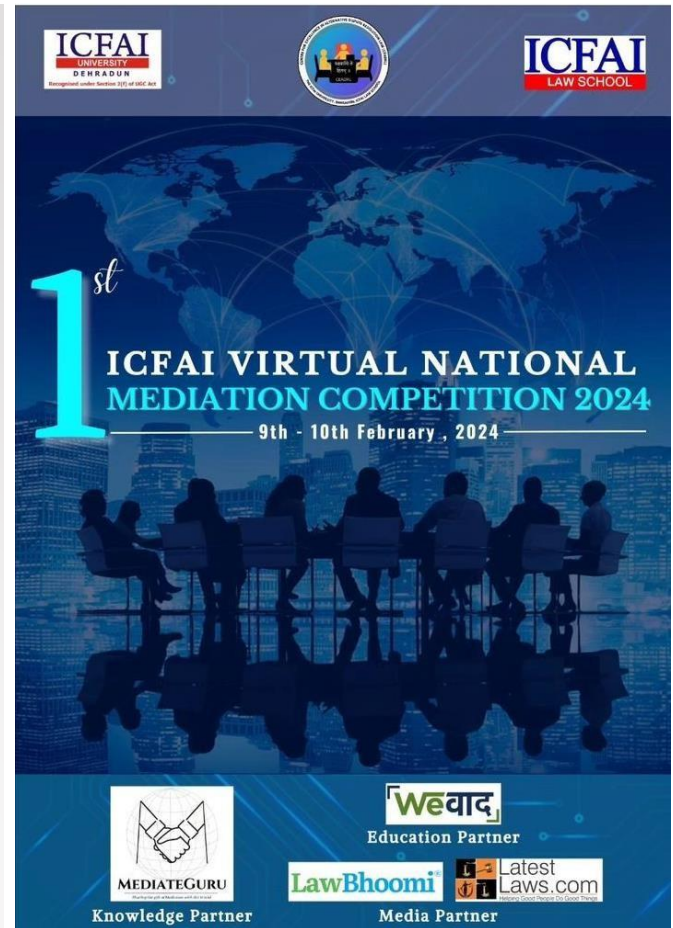

The 1st ICFAI Virtual National Mediation Competition, 2024 marked a significant milestone in legal education, offering a dynamic platform for law students across India to display their mediation skills. This pioneering event was organized by the Centre for Excellence in Alternate Dispute Resolution Law (CEADRL) Committee of the ICFAI Law School, part of The ICFAI University, Dehradun.

The competition was meticulously organized by the CEADRL Committee, which is dedicated to promoting alternate dispute resolution (ADR) methods within the legal community. Their efforts were complemented by the invaluable support of several partners. As a knowledge partner, MEDIATE GURU provided expert insights and resources, helping participants understand the nuances of mediation. Serving as an education partner, WEVAD contributed to the academic rigor of the event, ensuring that the competition maintained high educational standards.

LAWBHOOMI & LATESTLAWS.COM as media partners played a crucial role in publicizing the event and highlighting its significance within the legal fraternity.

The ICFAI Virtual National Mediation Competition underscored the importance of ADR in resolving conflicts without resorting to litigation. It also emphasized the role of mediation in fostering a collaborative and less adversarial legal culture. By participating in this competition, law students not only gained practical experience but also learned the importance of empathy, patience, and creativity in resolving disputes.

The success of this inaugural event sets a promising precedent for future competitions. The organizers plan to expand its reach, encouraging even more participation from law schools nationwide and potentially, internationally. This event is poised to become a cornerstone in the landscape of legal education, promoting the values of ADR and preparing the next generation of lawyers to be effective mediators.

Congratulations

We extend our heartfelt congratulations to all the students for their outstanding achievements in the 1st International Moot Court Competition, organized by Acropolis Institute at Indore, Madhya Pradesh. The hard work, dedication, and exceptional advocacy skills of the participants have truly shone through in this prestigious competition. Their performances showcased not only their talent but also their unwavering commitment to the legal profession. Moot court competitions are rigorous platforms that test participants' legal knowledge, critical thinking, teamwork, and effective communication. These students have demonstrated these qualities admirably, proving themselves to be exemplary future legal professionals. Participation in a moot court competition requires more than just understanding the law; it demands the ability to think critically, work cohesively with a team, and communicate effectively. These students have excelled in all these areas. Their success in this competition is a testament to their perseverance, resilience, and passion for the law.

Workshop

The Intellectual Property Rights (IPR) Awareness Workshop was organized by the IPR Cell at ICFAI Law School on March 9th and 10th, 2024. This event aimed to deepen the understanding of intellectual property (IP) among students and faculty members. The workshop featured a series of sessions and discussions focusing on various facets of intellectual property rights, including patents, trademarks, copyrights, and trade secrets.

Key Highlights of the Workshop:

1. Educational Sessions on IP Concepts:

Patents: Experts explained the process of patenting, criteria for patentability, and the significance of protecting inventions. They also discussed the impact of patents on innovation and industry.

Trademarks: The importance of trademarks in branding and the legal mechanisms for their protection were covered. Participants learned about trademark registration processes and enforcement strategies.

2. Insights and Experiences:

Speakers shared personal experiences and case studies to illustrate the practical applications of IP laws. These real-world examples helped contextualize theoretical knowledge.

Participants gained insights into the challenges and opportunities associated with IP management in various industries.

3. Networking and Collaboration:

The workshop provided a platform for students, faculty, and industry professionals to network. This interaction fostered an exchange of ideas and facilitated the building of professional connections.

Opportunities for future collaboration were explored, with discussions on joint projects, research initiatives, and potential internships or placements in the IP field.

4. Interactive Sessions:

Q&A sessions allowed participants to engage with experts, clarifying doubts and gaining deeper insights into specific IP issues.

Group discussions and activities encouraged active participation, ensuring that attendees could apply what they learned in practical scenarios.

Outcomes of the Workshop:

Enhanced Understanding: Participants left with a clearer understanding of the various aspects of intellectual property rights and their significance in both academic and professional contexts.

Skill Development: Attendees acquired new skills related to IP management, which can be applied in their future careers.

Some Thoughts!!

A Constitutional Mandate for Gender Equity and Human Dignity: A Juridical Analysis of Menstrual Leave Legislation in India.

- Mr. Rupaksh Sharma, Assistant Professor

Menstrual leave is a statutory policy that allows women to take leave during menstruation, addressing health and social needs specific to women. In India, this policy intersects with constitutional values of gender equity and human dignity, particularly under Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), and 42 of the Indian Constitution. These provisions guarantee gender equality, prohibit discrimination, and mandate the State to secure humane work conditions, including maternity relief. Key case law, such as Vishaka v. State of Rajasthan and Air India v. Nergesh Meerza, highlights the judiciary's commitment to ensuring gender-specific issues are considered in employment policies, setting the stage for policies like menstrual leave. States like Karnataka and Bihar have taken steps toward implementing menstrual leave policies, with Bihar offering two days of leave since 1992, demonstrating its feasibility in practice.

Despite its alignment with constitutional mandates, menstrual leave faces challenges and criticisms. Critics argue that such policies may reinforce gender stereotypes, potentially leading to workplace discrimination and concerns about reduced productivity. Additionally, ensuring the fair implementation of menstrual leave without misuse presents challenges for policymakers and employers. However, if implemented effectively, menstrual leave can foster a more inclusive workplace and contribute to true gender equality. The initiatives in Karnataka and Bihar signal progress in recognizing women's specific health needs and represent important milestones on India's path to a more equitable society.

"Ensuring Fairness and Efficiency: Challenges and Imperatives for the Civil Procedure Code (CPC) in Contemporary India".

- Dr. Vivek Kumar, Assistant Professor

In the face of rapid legal and technological developments, India's Civil Procedure Code (CPC) continues to play a pivotal role in ensuring fairness and efficiency in the judicial system. Established in 1908, the CPC provides a structured framework for handling civil cases, including processes for filing cases, serving summonses, presenting evidence, and delivering judgments. Over the years, judicial interpretations and reforms have aimed to simplify these procedures, reduce litigation delays, and promote prompt dispute resolution. Technological advancements, such as digital case management tools, virtual hearings, and e-filing systems, further demonstrate the CPC's adaptability to modern challenges, highlighting its relevance in an evolving legal landscape. However, despite its effectiveness, the CPC faces criticisms for its procedural complexities, which often hinder access to justice, particularly for marginalized communities without legal assistance.

To address these challenges, legal experts advocate for simplifying the CPC's language and processes, increasing transparency, and expanding access to justice. The integration of technology, particularly through e-courts and digitalized records, offers promising solutions. By streamlining procedures, reducing delays, and enabling virtual participation in judicial proceedings, these initiatives broaden access to justice across geographical and social divides. In order for the CPC to maintain its relevance in contemporary India, ongoing reforms must focus on making legal processes more accessible, efficient, and transparent while embracing technological innovations that can transform the judicial system for the better.

SPIRITUALLY ORIENTED MATERIALISM: NEED OF THE HOUR

- Dr. Arun Singh, Professor

Vedas are prime Granthas of Sanatan Dharma. There are four Vedas- Rigveda, Sam Veda, Yajurveda and Atharvaveda. Rigveda is the oldest. In the different hymns of Rigveda right from its 1st mandala to 10th Mandala, the blessings of the Gods have been involved to bestow on the worshipers the gift of health, wealth, long life, sons and grandsons, wife and property. Desire of materialistic happiness pervades the Rigveda. Arth and Kama are not ignored. Their realization is circumscribed by the dictates of Dharma.

Vedic materialism is theistic.

The Charvaka philosophy, on the other hand, is materialistic. It accepts the existence of material objects- earth, water, fire and air, and does not accept any conscious existence named soul. Out of four labours of life, it accepts only two labours- Arth and Kama denying the existence of dharma and Moksha (salvation).

Pure materialism is its forte. It is very much atheistic in nature.

Some Indian scholars are of the view that essentially materialistic attitude is necessary for man to prosper in the worldly life. Materialism has many ramifications. The doctrine of materialism considers material elements, the primary elements and the cause of all animate life. So, description of the world is only possible through materialistic interpretations. Followers of materialism are of firm view that human development is only possible through materialistic means. Whatever senses apprehend directly comes under the cover of materialism.

Two types of materialism can be traced in the ancient Indian traditions: Deranged materialism which can be seen in the Vedas and Upanishads and Arranged materialism which is found in Charvaka philosophy.

Vedas and Upanishads do not propound materialism directly but there are undercurrents of this philosophy.

Charvaka philosophy depicts a systematic materialism in Indian philosophy. Body is the contribution of only four elements: Air, water, earth and fire. None of the four elements have consciousness. So, how can there be consciousness in the body which is a combination of these elements. Mobility is inherent in these element. Death of the body means Moksha because body and soul are one and the same thing. Enjoyment, indulgence and licentious activities are end of life in Charvaka philosophy. Virtuous actions are fallacy and delusions. Only enjoyment is real and solid. Life ends with death. So this materialism believes in indulgences of the senses. Fulfilment of the body desires is the ultimate aim.

This Charvaka philosophy vehemently contradicts the Vedic thoughts. Materialistic attitudes to life prevalent today is similar to that advocated by Charvaka philosophy. However, the Vedic conception appears to be sounder and more reasonable. The Vedic concept is a synthesis of materialism and spiritualism, as both are real. So spiritually oriented materialism is considered the need of the hour to shape the world.

Despair

-Ishan Vatsa, BBA.LL.B.(Hons.) 5th Year

Embarking once more on this cursed trail,
With all my might, yet destined to fail.
A rancid stench, death's cruel embrace,
An empty soul, in this desolate place.

This taste in my mouth, more vile than bile,
An agonizing echo, no comfort, no smile.
As I confront it, the truth becomes clear,
Though I've trudged this path, it's despair I fear.

No refuge in sight; torment my guide,
The absence of bonds, my worth has died.
Time will reveal if I'll endure this trek,
Or if loneliness will consume my wreck.

The darkness within, a relentless abyss,
Whispering doom in a cold, deadly kiss.
No light at the end, just shadows that crawl,
In this pit of despair, forever I fall.

In this final, mournful verse, I lay my sorrow bare,
A love turned to a cursed hearse,
A burden hard to bear.

This pen, my last confession,
Writes of dreams that could not be,
Of a love lost to transgression, Now
adrift on a darkened sea.
